

What's the Buzz on Obama?

Social Studies/Government for College Students, 100 & 200 levels

Overview	This lesson plan is designed to have students use the internet to gain knowledge about the public opinion on President Elect Obama and create a Ning group to share opinions.
Objective	After viewing internet opinions should be able to write a paper explaining the public opinion (nationally and internationally) about President Elect Obama.
Standards
Materials	Computer with internet access, webcam, microphone
Procedure	<ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Since the election of the first black president, there has been much discussion on the impact of the results. Please familiarize your self with the history that is going to be made with this elections on sites such as http://www.cnn.com or http://www.foxnews.com2. Write a small paragraph detailing your findings3. Now read up on the international issues surrounding this election; such as the Russian conflict and African countries response.4. Once you have found FIVE compelling stories post your response on a Ning network that will be created for the class.
Evaluation	After doing this, students will write a 3-5 page paper detailing their findings, and will receive a B or better to be considered mastering the topic.